PUBLISHER'S NOTE

Series One of this microfilm project makes available the papers of C P Scott, 1846-1932, from the John Rylands University Library of Manchester. Part 1 features his political diary, 1911-1928 and general correspondence files for the period 1870-1932.

C P Scott remains as one of the giants of the world journalism. When he died in 1932, after 58 years as Editor of the Manchester Guardian, tributes, like those below poured in from around the world.

"For more than half a century a leading figure - perhaps the Leader - in the journalism of the world."
Christian Science Monitor, 4 January 1932

"He was the noblest figure in modern journalism. His was always a most potent appeal to the conscience of the world."
David Lloyd George, British Prime Minister, 1916-1922

Gandhi, Cosgrave and Sokolnikov recorded official tributes on behalf of the Indian, Irish and Russian peoples who acknowledged Scott's importance in their struggles for independence. For Scott had sought out the truth behind the conflict and propaganda which as otherwise all pervasive. He lifted The Guardian from being one of many national papers in Britain to being a major moral force in world politics.

From Scott's earliest days as Editor, when he promoted Gladstone's Home Rule Bill, he turned The Guardian into a forthright, campaigning paper. He gathered news himself from his many friends and contacts who included Gladstone, Lloyd George, John Dillon, the Fawcetts and Pankhursts, Kerensky, Arthur Henderson, Chaim Weizmann, Jan Smuts and Rabindranath Tagore. He encouraged his reporters to probe the official accounts of the news and to write with candour.

Despite his rise to fame and the fact that he had meticulously recorded his many meetings as well as carrying out a correspondence with statesmen worldwide, C P Scott left no memoirs and never wrote a book of reminiscences.

His complete general correspondence is now published for the first time - nearly 4,000 letters in total. The list of correspondents reads like a who's who of late nineteenth and early twentieth century politics. It includes:

The Earl of Aberdeen, Herbert Asquith, Lady Astor, A J Balfour, Baron Beaverbrook, H N Brailsford, George Cadbury, Sir Roger Casement, Winston Churchill, William Cosgrave, Charles Dilke, John Dillon, Sir Robert Ensor, Millicent Fawcett, J L Garvin, Margaret Gaskell, Herbert and W E Gladstone, Viscount Haldane, James Keir Hardie, Leonard Hobhouse, J A Hobson, H M Hyndmann, John Maynard Keynes, W Labouchere, Wilfrid Laurier, David Lloyd-George, James Ramsay MacDonald, Alfred Marshall, John Masefield, E D Morel, Henry Wood Nevinson, Florence Nightingale, William O'Brien, Christabel, Emmeline and Sylvia Pankhurst, V N Polovtsev, John Redmond, George W E Russell, Sir Michael Sadler, Anatole Sax, George Bernard Shaw, Kay Shuttleworth, Jan Smuts, W T Stead, Rabindranath Tagore, John Edward Taylor, Arnold Toynbee, Sidney Webb, Chaim Weizmann and Woodrow Wilson.

The substance and the quality of the correspondence will strike anyone who works with the archive. For instance, exchanges with John Dillon discuss the inherent dangers of armed revolution. Correspondence with Polovtsev, Smuts, Tagore and Weizmann discuss worldwide struggles for freedom. Extensive correspondence with both David Lloyd George and James Ramsay MacDonald discuss the politicians' constant battle to avoid sacrificing principles for the sake of political power. The rise of the Labour Party is charted, as is the demise of the Liberal Party. In a letter dated 4 December 1922 to Bonar Law, Scott bemoans: "I am greatly concerned for the future of the Liberal Party which stands in imminent danger of extinction as a Parliamentary force. I don't think you, or any Conservative statesman, can wish that to happen".

Women's Suffrage is a most vexed issue. In a letter of 22 August 1910, Mrs Pankhurst asked Scott to use his influence to clarify misrepresentations of the Conciliation Bill: "Mr Lloyd George's speech was made important by the wide publicity given to it in the Press. It contained a very grave misrepresentation of the scope of the Conciliation Bill which it was most important to have corrected. As you know it is exceedingly difficult for Suffragists to get their contradictions and corrections of such errors and misrepresentations published in the daily papers, but we have come to look upon the Manchester Guardian as less unfair in this respect than other newspapers".

Equally, on 21 November 1911, the Home Secretary, Reginald McKenna confided to Scott: "There is a difficulty in the way of arresting the suffragette demonstrators and then discharging them as they have to come before the Magistrates who, in our experience, dislike this procedure. I quite agree that the arrests should be made quickly and the demonstrators denied, as far as possible, the opportunity of 'martyrdom'".

It is interesting that both parties in many disputes should confide in Scott and canvass him for support.

Particular issues which are well documented include:

- The Russian Revolution
- Political and Military Struggles in South Africa
- The Great War, 1914-1915
- Irish Independence
- Women's Suffrage
- Zionism
- The rise of the Labour Party and the Decline of the Liberals
- Movements for Colonial Freedom

These issues are also treated at length in his contemporary notes of meetings with the leading figures. There are lengthy notes of his discussions with Sir John Simon and Lloyd George when the First World War broke out, for instance, as well as inside stories concerning the South African Settlement, the Indian Independence movement, and the Czarina, Rasputin and the Bolsheviks.

These appear in C P Scott's political diaries, 1911-1928, which are published in full for the first time.

Trevor Wilson's edited version of The Political Diaries of C P Scott (Collins, London, 1970) has already provided a foretaste of the richness of this source. As he says, "the value of a journal like this lies less in its startling revelations than in the cumulative effect of dozens of tiny incidents which it records." Only the complete publication of the diaries enables this full cumulative impact to strike home. In fact, it often seems as though Scott had more one-to-one meetings with Lloyd George, for instance, than many Cabinet Ministers. These events are captured with a journalistic eye for detail and bring to life many great historical events.

He met frequently with John Dillon in 1914 to discuss Irish Nationalism. On February 7, 1914 the entry reads, "Lunched with Dillon at Bath Club and had two hours with him - he argued strongly and persistently against any statement by the PM at this stage of the particular concessions he was prepared to offer to Ulster - To do so, he said, would be to create an impossible parliamentary position.". A little later on April 26 he met with Dillon again: "Dillon called on me at my house, having been at meeting in Manchester previous evening. We spoke of landing arms and other illegalities in Ulster on previous day. I said we had perhaps made mistake in not checking volunteer movement sooner. He dissented, and strongly deprecated any action even now which might lead to actual conflict between army and volunteers - fearing effect on future of Ireland."

On the outbreak of the First World War, C P Scott was summoned to see Sir John Simon and Lloyd George. He recorded the following remarkable testimony: "*Up to last Sunday only two members of the Cabinet had been in favour of our intervention in the War, but the violation of Belgian territory had completely altered the situation - He had gone so far, however, as to urge that if Germany would consent to limit her occupation of Belgian territory to the extreme southerly point of Belgium - the sort of nose of land running out by Luxembourg - he would resign rather than make this a causus belli - Presumably therefore some such offer was made to Germany and declined - Apart from that it would have been impossible to draw us into war now.*".

Similar frank testimonies concern Lord Fisher on Jutland, vivid accounts from Arthur Henderson about the Bolsheviks, Primrose on Palestine, Jan Smuts on the peace in South Africa ("we had fought persistently for a better settlement and failed.") and the Webbs on the repeal of the Trades Union Act.

A further interesting extract of 6 February 1914, documents McKenna's views on the Navy Estimates: "Saw McKenna, primarily about the Press Competitions Bill. Then he opened up on subject of the Naval Estimates taking it up at the point where we had left it on the Sunday week previous at Walton Heath - Reminded me that he had at last been actually rude to Lloyd George, on the subject of his ridiculously inadequate proposal to be satisfied with the promise - and not even the promise, but the hope - of reductions in 1915-16, without any serious attempt to secure reduction in 1914-15, and how, thus goaded, Lloyd George had proposed a meeting next day at the Treasury of the party of economy in the Cabinet - the meeting was held, but instead of any improvement in Lloyd George's attitude, it was as bad as ever, or worse - so much so that after the meeting was over McKenna wrote and told him that he could not undertake to follow his lead in the Cabinet."

A final example is the following record of his meeting with Lloyd George on 17 October 1915 to discuss the war situation and the question of conscription: "He was doubting whether to bring matters to a crisis at the Cabinet next day. Said conditions in Russia were far worse than supposed. Government had received a telegram to say that total losses of Russian Armies were 6 million (2 million prisoners) and they had left only 700,000 fighting men. He asked me what I, C P Scott, would do if I were Lloyd George - I replied that the question wasn't an easy one, but that I believed the voluntary system if pressed to its furthest point would give nearly as good a return of men as compulsion and that the difference which might remain would not be worth splitting the nation for - in any case I thought the nation was totally unprepared for a break up of the Government on the issue of compulsion and for a possible general election as a consequence."

As well as being a major source for the events of the period these papers also illuminate the tensions that lie between journalism and politics. Even if a paper pursues truth its choice of issues and the weight it gives them is important. The power of the press is in the form of patronage that an Editor and Proprietor can bestow. What is given in return?

Scott's notes in the typescript diaries and some items of correspondence show that subtle and less subtle pressures were applied to release and suppress the news.

Students of Journalism and all those studying modern history will find a wealth of untapped material to consider. The role of The Guardian in changing society and attitudes can be contrasted with the role of key political events and allegiances in making The Guardian.

This hard-copy guide accompanies Part 1 of this microform project. It gives a breakdown of the contents of reels and a detailed list of correspondents.

Further helpful information is available on Reel 1 of the film. This provides three separate hand-lists. The first of these covers the general scope of The Guardian archives (the section microfilmed in Part 1 is only a small portion of this, covering all of the general correspondence files and the typescript diaries of C P Scott); the second hand list is an index of correspondents and relates to the detailed list in this guide; the third hand list covers "Series A" of The Guardian Staff Files and this is included purely for cross-reference purposes.

Two other useful sources to refer to are J L Hammond's biography, C P Scott of the Manchester Guardian (G Bell & Sons, London, 1934) David Ayerst's Guardian: Biography of a Newspaper Collins, London, 1971).

TECHNICAL NOTE

Our microfilm publications have been prepared and produced in accordance with recommended and established guidelines for the production of microform of superior quality. These conform to the recommendations of the standard guides to good microforming and micropublishing practice.

Attention should be drawn to the nature of the original material. The typescript political diaries are stapled together in small sections. These staples have been removed to facilitate filming.

Many folders contain correspondence. Item numbers are marked on individual letters in pencil. A few letters are in rather fragile condition, a few are faintly legible or have been written on both horizontally and vertically with text merging in a cross-hatch pattern. A few manuscript documents consist of faintly legible correspondence and records written with a variety of inks, pens or pencils and on paper which has become severely discoloured or stained, or which is so thin that there is show through that renders the original document to read. A few items consist of photocopies of documents.

These original characteristics present difficulties of image and contrast which stringent tests and camera alterations cannot entirely overcome. Every effort has been made to minimise these difficulties. The outside covers of all files, folders and volumes have been filmed. Where the item number is difficult to read this has been filmed again on a sheet of plain white paper.

The most responsible care has been exercised in the filming of this unique collections and this microfilm publication meets the standards established by the Association for Information and Image Management (AIIM) and the American National Standards Institute (ANSI).

CONTENTS OF REELS

REEL 1

Hand lists:

- (i) Guardian Archives, part 1
- (ii) C P Scott Correspondence
- (iii) Guardian Staff Files, series A

The first hand list covers the general scope of the Guardian Archives. The section covered by Part 1 of this microfilm project is but a small portion of this, covering all of the general correspondence files and the typescript diaries of Scott. The second hand list draws upon the Card Catalogue and is most relevant to Part 1 of this microfilm project, being a detailed list of correspondents included in the sections of General Correspondence. The third hand list covers a totally different group of letters: "Series A" of the Staff Files. These will be covered at a future point in time. Their hand list is included here to allow researchers to make cross-references and comparisons.

C P SCOTT: A CHRONOLOGY

1821 - Foundation of the Manchester Guardian by John Edward Taylor, a radical Unitarian married to Sophia Scott, sister of CPS's father.

1830 - Birth of John Edward Taylor the 2nd.

1846 - Charles Prestwick Scott born at Bath, the 8th of 9 children (CPS had 3 elder brothers and 4 elder sisters - the 9th child died in infancy).

1853-64 - CPS attends Hove House school in Brighton (run by a Unitarian minister) and then Clapham Grammar School (run by Charles Pritchard, and noted educational reformer).

1861 - John Edward Taylor the 2nd takes control of the Manchester Guardian.

1865-69 - CPS goes up to Corpus Christi College, Oxford. He befriends Robert Bridges (two years his senior), is Secretary of the Anti-Mendacity Society (speaks at the Union) and is involved in College rowing. His first article for The Guardian is a description of a race on the Seine between the Corpus boat and a crew of old Etonians. CPS graduates with a 1st in Greats. CPS then embarks on a Grand Tour of Europe.

1870 - CPS has a 6-month apprenticeship working for The Scotsman in Edinburgh.

1871 - CPS arrives in Manchester in February to work at The Guardian. He befriends Ford Madox Brown.

1872 - CPS formally appointed Editor of The Guardian, in January, aged 25. Rachel Cook (CPS's future wife) is introduced to CPS's sister, Catherine, by Madame Bodichon in October. George Eliot said that Rachel was the most beautiful woman that she had ever seen. She was one of the 7 original students at the Women's College in Hitchin (later becoming Girton College, Cambridge) and contributed review articles to The Guardian.

1874 - CPS marries Rachel, youngest daughter of John Cook, Professor of Ecclesiastical History at the University of St Andrews. The Scotts have four children: Madeline (1876-1958); Lawrence Prestwich (1877-1908); John Russell (1879-1949); and Edward Taylor (1883-1932).

1886 - The Guardian achieves national prominence through its support of the Home Rule Bill.

1892 - The Guardian first offers support for the cause of Women's Suffrage, publishing a report on the Female Suffrage Bill.

1895 - CPS elected Liberal MP for the Leigh Division of Lancashire (after failed attempts to be elected in 1886, 1891 and 1892). CPS plays a prominent part in the Manchester Liberal Federation, is re-elected in 1900 but retires in 1905.

1899 - The Guardian achieves national and international notice by supporting South African self-government at the start of the Boer War.

1905 - John Edward Taylor the 2nd dies and his will gives his cousin, CPS, first option to purchase The Guardian for £10,000. Death of Rachel.

1907 - CPS purchases The Guardian. CPS's third son, Edward Taylor Scott, marries Mabel Hobson, daughter of J A Hobson.

1908 - Death of Lawrence Prestwich Scott, CPS's eldest son.

1911 - CPS commences his political diary.

1914-18 - CPS supports Lloyd George throughout the war. He introduces him to Dr Chaim Weizmann, Reader in Biology at the University of Manchester, whose help in the war effort was rewarded by Lloyd-George's support for the creation of a Jewish State of Palestine. CPS's diary contains very full entries for the War and the Russian Revolution.

1921 - The Guardian celebrates its 100th anniversary and CPS celebrates 50 years editing the paper.

1929 - CPS retires after death of L T Hobhouse.

1932 - Death of CP Scott.
